EDITORIAL NEWS

It's time to celebrate "The Good Old Days" in Richmond! There is something special about looking into the past and honoring the rural roots of our community. We love reminiscing about life as it was—or as we think it was "back in the good old days."

The staff of the Lois Wagner Memorial Library is proud of our library's heritage in Richmond. We're humbled when we visualize the ladies of the "Civic Improvement Club" diligently collecting books for the library in 1905. (They collected one hundred.) We are pleased with the knowledge that the Richmond Public Library was formally organized in 1912. And we're very proud when we reminisce about all the changes that have occurred throughout our library's history from 1912 to present day, 2018.

Sometimes to truly appreciate the present, one needs to look back with admiration and respect at the accomplishments of the past. That's what the "Good Old Days" is all about: Honoring Richmond's past, while enjoying present day-to-day life, and anticipating Richmond's wonderful future. Have fun remembering and celebrating the "Good Old Days!"

(Richmond "Good Old Days" Festival brochures are available at the library)

SPORTS

"Richmond Town Baseball Team" photo, taken between 1900-1910.

William Friday is the player standing in front of the man in the suit. The first man in line is believed to be Albert Lindke, and the second man is a Priestap.

(More historic photos of Richmond are available at the library.)
